

I am writing to express my strong support for this concept! I think the raised intersections are a really great idea, and can actually imagine letting my kids cross by themselves on them.

Regarding the positions of the smaller speed tables in the middle of Lincoln: they are good, but there really needs to be something right at the end of Lincoln Ave. People speed up a lot trying to make it across the Amity Street intersection and on to Lincoln heading north. Cars are often speeding long before they get to that middle speed table location. It would be very effective and a great addition to public safety to have a raised crosswalk at the south end of Lincoln (Lincoln/Amity). This is a really dangerous crossing!

For maximum benefit and effect this should be a neighborhood wide effort including Sunset Ave., Fearing St., North Lincoln Ave., Blue Hills Rd. and McClellan St., etc.

Thank you very much for all your time and effort on this issue.

Sincerely,

Susan Rupp
